Les Collections de Monsieur, frre de Louis XIV: Orfvrierie et objets d'art des Orlans sous l'Ancien Rgime

Paul Micio : Les Collections de Monsieur, frre de Louis XIV: Orfvrierie et objets d'art des Orlans sous l'Ancien Rgime before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Les Collections de Monsieur, frre de Louis XIV: Orfvrierie et objets d'art des Orlans sous l'Ancien Rgime:

As surprising as it may seem, the collections of Monsieur, brother of Louis XIV, and of his family, have never been studied in depth. And yet, these collections of silver metalwork, jewelry, art objects, cameos, and precious stones were the most spectacular and varied of the Ancien Rgime. Thanks to the generous cooperation of the Orlans family, who granted access to its family archives, and to the research carried out by Paul Micio in France, Spain, and England, this exhaustive study traces these unique collections belonging to this important family from the Renaissance to the end of the 18th century. Featuring hundreds of images of paintings, designs, engravings, table setting plans, jewelry, silver, art objects, mounted porcelains, and hardstones, this volume will be of interest to scholars and amateurs alike and is a key reference work on French Decorative Art of the 17th and 18th centuries. It is accompanied by a CD containing 500 pages of archival material and never-before published documents.

About the Author Paul Micio is an expert on silver and decorative arts, and the author of a number of books and articles on French metalwork. He collaborates regularly with museums all over the world, including the Louvre, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Getty, the Victoria Albert Museum, and the Nationalmuseum of Stockholm.
