Landfair"The Fifth Codex" is the second in the murder series by John Scherber. Scherber lives in San Miguel de Allende in Mexico and he makes this expat favorite city the centerpiece of his novel. The reason he recently said an interview is the "...exotic backdrop with a lot of color and history."The main character is Paul Zacher, a painter, who with his long time Mexican, girlfriend Maya, and friend Cody, an ex-policeman from Peoria get innocently roped into a deadly situation involving a Codex that could inflame Mayan separatists. Scherber describes his "...villains as flawed people, not demons or monsters. "Im interested in the way they rationalize the crimes they commit."The book is a page turner. Scherber is a fine writer with a witty take on events as they happen. I.m on to the third book in the series. Won't you come along?0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. ... as well as the second in the series is great.

Looking forward to moving to San Miguel in ...By RockyI now am almost through book one and it as well as the second in the series is great. Looking forward to moving to San Miguel in March. I plan on reading all of them as they read very well.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. are really good.By CustomerOk just finished the Fifth Codex in record time. couldn't put it down.... I have already bought Brushwork but I am afraid to start it as I am getting nothing else accomplished!! I will list my chores and then reward myself with an hour of reading...You, Senor Scherber, are really good.

About John ScherberJohn Scherber, a Minnesota native, has been a theater critic, film critic, cabinet maker, portrait painter, landscape painter, stock broker, editor, stock market trader and house restorer. He is, by some accounts, a renaissance man, by others, a rolling stone.He began writing the Murder in Mexico series on a painting trip to Taos. There are eight mysteries set in San Miguel de Allende, an old colonial town in the central highlands that was at the heart of the 1810 War of Independence.After many visits, he and his wife Kristine took up permanent residence in San Miguel in 2007. Rounding out their household is their adopted bilingual Mexican street dog, Brownie. He is also the author of San Miguel de Allende; A Place in the Heart, a nonfiction account of the expatriate experience, and Twenty Centavos.Visit his website at sanmiguelallendebooks.com
